Control rules

- NEVER go faster than the GasyQuad guide
- If the GasyQuad guide is driving too fast for your liking, do not hesitate to mention him by honking, it will adapt
- The Tour is in single file, the order is originally indicated by the GasyQuad guide. Be sure to follow that order throughout the Tour
- NEVER pass another ATV or other vehicle except on instruction of the GasyQuad guide
- Obey the safety distance specified by the GasyQuad guide
 - The brakes of a quad is not as effective as a car or motorbike and risks of slippage are increased by the speed and nature of the road, give you the distance needed to brake smoothly
- When another ATV or other vehicle is about to pass you, let pass by slowing and deporting you on the right
- Slow down on slippery roads, into uncharted territory or when visibility is reduced
- The holes in the pavement and tracks cause sudden moves of the handlebars which may result in injury or loss of control if the two handles are not firmly gripped. So make sure you engage in rough terrain with all due caution in terms of speed.
- When the ATV is leaning left or right by the side of the runway approached, lean slightly in the opposite direction to compensate and avoid knock you down on the side
- Similarly, in tight turns, compensate by leaning in the direction of the turn, again to avoid knock you down
- At a steep slope such as passage of a raft or a walk, slow down and offset the shock by mounting the handle firmly
- Always slow down when you meet or overtake pedestrians, cyclists, carts or other non-motorized or stationary vehicle
- Slow down when passing in the villages or populated area, a running child attracted by the sound of a quad will not necessarily pay attention to the following ATVs
- When people greet you from the roadside, do not take unnecessary risks by waving your hand, keep in mind that you risk losing control of the ATV without both handles firmly gripped
- Slow down when animals are present at the edge or the middle of the road, they can be unpredictable and take paths that you can not anticipate
 - Beware of chicken!
- In practice, carefully follow all directions and instructions given by the GasyQuad guide
